Dave O'Neil is out of the house and on his way to the Wild West

One of Australia's most versatile and loved comedians, Dave O'Neil, is back on stage after four years of being stuck in his house. The talented comedian has delighted audiences for over 20 years and is performing his solo show for the first time at the Hellenic Centre as part of the 2011 Wild West Comedy Festival.

Dave, a regular on ABC TV's Spicks & Specks, Adam Hills' On Gordon Street Tonight and Network 10's Good News Week, said 'it will be great to get back on stage 'cos I don't get out too much. Putting the bin out these days is a night out... Tuesday is a big night at my place, sometimes we have recycling on a Thursday and I'm knackered those weeks'.

Dave brings his laid back and self-deprecating comic perspective on life for anyone who has been in a relationship and either has children, has come into contact with, or has had enough of their kids. The easy-going comedian has plenty of material to draw on, combining his time in breakfast radio, regular comedy and TV with a long term relationship and being a hands-on Dad to three children.

"Leaving the house with three screaming kids can sometimes take a more complex exit strategy than the Americans leaving Iraq," Dave said.

Last year Dave broke his leg in 16 places. He ended up in hospital for two weeks, and was housebound for the next six. This year he is even happier to be out of the house after that experience!

So book early and see Dave in fine form after practicing this one for a while.

"O'Neil is a polished performer, whose cultivated dagginess and self-deprecatory ways are part of his charm." - The Australian
